Pine Cone Candidates

Carmel is particularly fortunate in the candidates running for election to the city council. No matter how the election turns out next Tuesday, the results will not be disastrous because the four men running for the three council seats are sincere, honest and intelligent.

However, since a choice must be made, the Pine Cone-Cymbal recommends Bernard Rowntree, Eben Whittlesey and Frank Hefling to the voters as the men we believe can serve the city best as council members.

Though it took considerable thought and sifting of available facts before we arrived at our choice of the latter two, because it meant the elimination of Allen Knight whom we like and respect, there was never a moment's hesitation over Bernard Rowntree. From the time he announced his willingness to run for re-election, he headed our list of candidates. Unlike the others, he is not untied. His record through three terms on the city council is there for inspection, and it is a record to inspire the confidence and gratitude of the people of Carmel whom he has unselfishly and wisely served over a period of years. We have disagreed with him on minor issues, but never have we had cause to complain of his decisions on the essentials. He has fought for years to preserve those things that give Carmel its character. Whenever we have detected propositions in the air that would serve as an opening wedge in the restrictions that keep the city a beautiful, uncomplicated place in which to live, we have had reassurance in the knowledge that when they came before the city council, Rowntree's "No" would be unequivocal. He knows the town and its people. He has seen Carmel grow up around him and has had no small part in moulding the form within which that growth has taken place. We sincerely urge his re-election. Especially do we appeal to the old-timers to turn out en masse and vote for him since there are many new-comers in the town and they may not know his worth.

Eben Whittlesey has sincerity, integrity and a high order of intelligence. A relative new-comer to Carmel, he has a few brash ideas for "improvements" with which we do not agree, nor will the other councilmen who will sit with him if he is elected—this we know—so there is no cause for alarm on that score. On the other hand, his youth, fresh point of view, and ability to view problems objectively, a characteristic of a mind that has been subjected to the discipline of legal training, will be a valuable asset in the deliberations of the council. Moreover, he is in touch with the people of Carmel.

You find him at the music society gatherings, you find him at the Lions club meetings, and you find him at church. He has the faculty of listening thoughtfully to the conversation of the people who talk to him and a great many people seek out this friendly young

Legion of Merit Medal Awarded Lt. Col. Eckhardt

Lieutenant Colonel George S. Eckhardt, General Staff Corps, U. S. Army, now on duty in the Central Pacific, has been awarded the Legion of Merit medal, according to word received by his wife, now making her home on Camino Real with her mother, Mrs. Henry D. Jay.

The citation accompanying the award reads as follows: "For exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services in the Office of the Assistant Chief of Staff, Operations Division, War Department General Staff, during the period 13 March, 1942 to 15 July, 1943. In his assignment as a member of the Pacific Theater Section and Chief of the Central Pacific Sub-Section of the Pacific Theater Section, Theater Group, Lieutenant Colonel Eckhardt demonstrated ability, initiative, leadership, and judgment of the highest caliber in the preparation of solutions to the many problems which were presented. Deserving of special mention are the services rendered by Lieutenant Colonel Eckhardt in preparation of details incident to the reorganization of major echelons of the Hawaiian Department. He also contributed materially to the close understanding that existed between the War Department and the Central Pacific Area by the able and tactful manner in which he carried out special instructions of the Chief of Staff while on temporary duty in the Central Pacific Area during the period 15 November 1942 to 24 December 1942. His foresight, initiative,

California Will Need WPA After War Says Speaker

To expect California to convert from war industries to peace basis without help from the federal government is unrealistic, according to Dr. Malcolm Davisson, economics professor at the University of California, who spoke in the adult school forum series at Sunset school on Tuesday evening. As there was a very small attendance, perhaps because of Holy Week services, the forum moved from the auditorium to more comfortable quarters in the school library. The subject was Postwar Readjustments in California.

It is not, said the speaker, that California wants a PWA or a WPA, but because the great industrial increase on this coast is war-induced, and of a type that cannot be readily converted to satisfaction of peacetime needs, that federal help will be required. It is estimated that the great aircraft industry will require only five per cent of present personnel to fill all peacetime demands for its products, and the shipyards but ten per cent of its employees; similarly 900,000 will be sufficient for government agencies and transportation in the state, out of

Malcolm Whitman Battles Rip Tide To Save 3 Lives

After several courageous efforts at rescue on the part of local people failed because of the violence of the rip tide Wednesday afternoon three men clinging to an overturned boat in Carmel Bay were brought safely ashore by Malcolm Whitman, Jr., probably the only man in Carmel who could have accomplished the feat.

The rescued were Dan Broughton, 16, Monterey, Johnnie Goulart, 17, Pebble Beach and Bob Hazelton, 23, Del Monte Barracks. When their boat overturned their plight was noticed by Lt. J. McOwen of the Monterey Section base who notified the police. Police Officer Frank Hay responded to the call. Alex Gibson, Jean Ricketts and Fred Mylar of the Fire Department brought the disaster truck, and Ricketts and Hay made an effort to launch a surf board but were thrown back by the force of the breakers. Lt. Byron W. Hunte of the A. G. F. Replacement Center at Fort Ord who lives on Dolores street, made three attempts to launch a boat through the breakers but the boat was upset each time. Helping him in his attempts to reach the men clinging to their overturned boat was R. W. Dahlgren, Mountain View and Tenth.

Ken Carleton and Malcolm Whitman tried to launch Whitman's boat without success. Finally Whitman succeeded in launching an air mattress, and with swim-fins on his feet to assist him in his battle through the current reached the men and brought them clinging to the air mattress safely ashore.

They had suffered severely from exposure and shock and were taken to the hospital in the ambulance.

Whitman's extensive knowledge and experience with the current and his ingenuity in choosing the air mattress and swim-fins for his equipment accounted for his success against conditions that were exceptionally bad in the bay which

Carmel Police Car Damaged in Tangle With Murphy Truck

A badly damaged prowl car was the result when one of M. J. Murphy's trucks and Carmel Police Officer Earl Wermuth's car came together at the intersection of Ninth and San Antonio streets Tuesday afternoon.

Wermuth, in pursuit of a loose dog that had been reported rabid, was driving south on San Antonio. Two Murphy trucks were rolling along ahead of him. He passed one and was about to pass the second at the intersection of Ninth when the driver turned east and according to Wermuth, side swiped his car. Damage to the police car consisted in a crumpled fender, smashed runningboard and damaged headlight.

The driver of the truck failed to make an arm signal, according to the police officer.

Jelich Not Guilty of Battery Charge Verdict of Jury

After deliberating twenty-five minutes yesterday noon, a jury of ten women and two men brought in a verdict of not guilty in the trial of Carmel Police Officer Edward Jelich charged with battery in the arrest of Mrs. Fred Horne for a traffic violation in Carmel on March 8.

Courthouse corridor rumors agree that on the first ballot the jurors voted nine to three for acquittal. There were two ballots taken.

The trial opened Tuesday morning.

District Attorney Anthony Brazil stated that the prosecution's case would be based on the question of the legality of the arrest, as it is acknowledged that an officer has the right to use force in making an arrest provided it is "reasonable force," and that the officer has a right to make the arrest, carried out as provided by law. He proposed to prove that such was not the case in the arrest of Mrs. Horne by Jelich.

Ralph O. Marron of Monterey conducted the defense.

First witness for the prosecution was Mrs. Fred Horne. She accused the police officer of following her on a number of occasions, of dragging her violently out of her car when she refused to sign a traffic citation, of refusing to tell her why she was being arrested, and of keeping her in the police station for an hour and a half while her children waited for her in the car.

She was substantiated in her testimony by her three daughters, Barbara Lee, 10, Diana Jean, 9, and Mary Eleanor, 12.

Pictures of bruises she stated were sustained when Jelich seized her by the arms and forced her head against the steering wheel of her car were entered as evidence

Salvage Dump to Be Abandoned on Post Office Lot

The city council voted Wednesday night to abandon the post office lot as a salvage dump, clear off the salvage that is there at present, remove the containers and put up a no-dumping sign. Due to the public disregard of the requests of the city to confine the material left on the lot to specified items that are needed in the war effort, the lot has become an eye sore and a menace to public health—"a garbage dump"—as the mayor described it in presenting the matter before the council.

If a satisfactory plan can be worked out with the A.W.V.S., salvage work of the Civilian Defense will henceforth be in charge of that organization since the members have expressed a willingness to undertake the management of the project.

Other business included the reading of a communication from Stephen G. Herrick, inquiring if there is an ordinance controlling the raising of chickens within the city limits, and if so, why was it not enforced. He said that he had suffered annoyance from the crowing of roosters kept by Capt. Tate Miller, and that there are other

ROWNTREE, HEFLING, KNIGHT

Having lived in Carmel for the past 24 years, I have had many opportunities to hear commitments regarding the future of Carmel. Particularly as a hotel man, I hear the visitors' viewpoint. Many of these same persons became property owners and have faith that Carmel will not change.

Former Carmel city councils have been elected because of good performance, confidence of new material and years as a resident to inherit the true village spirit. This qualification has been definitely proven in Councilman Bernard Rowntree, and it is my personal hope the citizens will show their appreciation.

Two new vacancies should also be given consideration to Allen Knight and Frank Hefling for valued experience gained as long time residents here in Carmel.

—Frederick M. Godwin

ALLEN KNIGHT

It will be a pleasure to see Allen Knight sitting in the City Hall at the council table.

He knew Carmel when it had several hundred people; now it has several thousand. Though the Carmel that was is swallowed up in the Carmel that is, the hardy, sparkling, individual quality of that now far away-time persists to shape the present and the future. Al Knight embodies that quality. With him—and others of the council who have a similar way of thinking—Carmel, though inescapably growing streamlined, will continue to be what it was originally intended to be—a village in a forest, set above a white beach and a blue, sounding sea.

—Talbert Josselyn

EBEN WHITTLESEY

I hope that those who go to the polls next April 11th will seriously consider Eben Whittlesey for councilman. Although he has been a resident of Carmel for only a few years I am confident that he came here to live for the same reasons that most of us Old Timers had when we chose this little village as the one place to live—because of its beauty, climate and uniqueness.

Mr. Whittlesey is outstanding in his sincere interest in community affairs; if elected he will not be handicapped with prejudices or political ties; and with his integrity and fearlessness I believe he will serve the best interests of Carmel.

—Marian D. Shand

EBEN WHITTLESEY

Unless Carmel citizens are asleep, or are uninterested in the management of their city, there should be many who are as outraged as I that Mayor McCreery should presume to tell the local electorate for whom to vote for council.

I like to think of Carmelites as independent thinkers. Surely they will see if the Mayor picks three out of four candidates as "his men," the fourth will bear investigation as a likely independent candidate. When that fourth candidate proves to possess the rare combination of honesty and intelligence, I say that man has my vote!

—Barbara Norberg

EBEN WHITTLESEY

Choosing to vote for Eben Whittlesey, Carmel attorney, as a councilman is a privilege planned on by far-seeing citizens. Especially those who see the important unique aspect of having this young lawyer as a city officer. They include the many who like to do a little thinking on their own account about the candidates. Not just those who know and like him personally, but strangers who have taken the trouble to obtain facts regarding his background, fitness, character, relation to Carmel etc.

Obviously, a legal expert to sit in on all civic huddles gratis is something Carmel would be definitely lucky to have and definitely foolish to pass up. Many is the time a lawyer's astuteness is bound to come in handy during the managing of town business. It's both preventative and corrective protection for citizens. An attorney as councilman is an excellent combination any way you look at it.

Mr. Whittlesey's civic mindedness has been proved. He has consistently shown active interest in Carmel by unflagging diligence in matters concerning its welfare. He is on the executive committee of the Community Chest. He is director of the Red Cross; vice-president of the Musical Art Club; vice-president of the Business Association. And he is known for his loyal work at the Episcopal church; for successful cooperation with the Bach Festival. He is a member of the Lion's Club.

That he would earnestly and ably fulfill the job of councilman, for which he volunteered, no one accurately informed can doubt.

Cool-headed yet sincerely and warmly responsive Mr. Whittlesey is a good mixer with an engaging sense of humor—(and any councilman can do with that!) He is an energetic, thorough person of unquestioned integrity.

Carmel is Mr. Whittlesey's home by choice. He picked it out as the most desirable place to live. This act of preference means something in estimating his relation to the town. He has his law offices here and intends to practice his profession in Carmel from now on. The fact this young attorney has not lived here a great many years is balanced by the innumerable ways he has already enthusiastically identified himself with our civic life.

He not only graduated from a California institution, the law school at Stanford University, but the 3,500,000 now so employed. As these industries are of national far more than of state importance, the U. S. government will need to assist in their change to peace conditions.

The huge influx of civilian population into California, due to war demands, has greatly complicated the whole picture. Contra Costa county has had an increase of 120 per cent, San Diego county, 50 per cent, and other industrial areas substantial gains since the beginning of 1940. This migration has converged upon the war industries and the areas about the large army camps; movement from within the state to these areas for highly paid jobs has robbed many communities and peacetime occupations of their ordinary quota of workers and increased the housing and supply problems in the congested areas. Practically all other types of work have suffered losses to the war industries.

When the war ends the big concerns will rapidly reduce to five or ten per cent of present personnel, government and transportation will greatly curtail their numbers, and great unemployment unless the slack can be taken up. While

Maude Wentworth

Mrs. Maude Wentworth, wife of Clarence Wentworth, was fatally injured Tuesday when her car collided with a truck north of Gilroy.

Mrs. Wentworth has lived for many years in Carmel as one of its best-loved and deeply respected citizens. Born in Gloversville, New York, she was carried as a baby to England, staying a year there and being brought back to Danvers, Massachusetts. Here she received her education and was married to Clarence Wentworth.

She came to Carmel in 1928 for a year's stay, later returning to make it her permanent home. At the time of her passing she had lived here for sixteen years.

Mrs. Wentworth has endeared herself to Carmel as an exceptionally lovely character, quick to respond to need and tireless in her devotion to her fellow beings. Almost all of her time was given to helping others. She was a valued practitioner of Christian Science where her work extended beyond the boundaries of Carmel.

In addition to her husband, she leaves a daughter, Mrs. Howard Page of Brownwood, Texas; a sister, Mrs. Robert McCluskey, of Arlington, N. J.; and five brothers: W. H. Watson of Keene, New Hampshire; R. E. Watson, Wollaston, Mass.; J. A. Watson, Danvers, Mass.; Geo. Watson of Taft, California, and Charles A. Watson of Carmel.

Services will be held at 1:30 p. m. Sunday at Paul's Chapel in Pacific Grove. Cremation will follow.

—M. B. M.

some persons will return to their former homes and to the occupations almost wiped out by war demands, planning is necessary to keep the situation from becoming serious. The construction industry and the many services now so short of workers can handle part of the unemployment, and if the Pacific war outlasts that in Europe, the necessity for satisfying the stepped-up demand will take additional workers. But both of these types of employment are only temporary, unless the basic industries can be fostered.

What the United States government will do with its huge industrial plants, its mountain of war supplies, what the tax policy will be, and the dissolution of emergency government controls necessary to conduct of the war, all will affect the development of industries which can give long-time employment. Only in the wise solution of these questions can a prolonged period of unemployment be avoided. Careful study and the emergence of an organized, intelligent public opinion are necessary to initiate a federal policy that will settle the whole problem satisfactorily.

FOREIGN POLICIES OF THE U.S.A.,
THE USSR AND BRITAIN

BY DR. OLIVE SWEZY

The much criticized lack of a foreign policy in Africa, Italy and elsewhere, is due to the driving forces behind two of the leaders, Roosevelt and Churchill, which, going in opposite directions, cancel each other out and produce only a static condition which is favorable for the growing influence of the third member of the trio, Stalin. Roosevelt, democratic and non-imperialistic, desires to make the world a place where nations may live in peace and security; Churchill, anti-democratic and deeply imperialistic, desires to return to the nineteenth century domination of the British Empire and its power politics. The one looks forward and the other backward. Hence the stalemate. To go in either direction would mean a break between the two.

A study of the map of the world, along with the statistics associated with it, plainly shows the relations between the foreign policies of the nations represented by these three men, and the factors of geography, including population and natural resources, with great similarity between two of them and great disparity in the case of the third.

The attitude of this country, expressed by Roosevelt, Welles and Wallace, follows naturally from its geographical factors. Its position as one of the largest, richest and most highly industrialized countries, makes it unnecessary to seek advantages at the expense of other peoples. Having great natural resources of its own, it does not cast covetous eyes on the resources of other nations and its predatory instincts have not been over-developed, as witnessed by its treatment of the Philippines.

The official British position is also shaped directly by its geographical factors. A small country, poor in natural resources, dependent upon world trade, its economy geared to world affairs, accustomed to think in world terms, it fears a future which menaces its former dominant position.

The stubborn fact that England is small and poor in itself has been brought brutally to public view in recent months. The first occasion was the speech of Churchill at Cambridge, in which he urged the union of this country with Britain. The suggestion seemed to drop into a vacuum, so Jan Christiaan Smuts was called upon to try his skill.

Forthright soldier as he is, Smuts stated frankly that he would "not like to see an unequal partnership" which made the post-war trinity of partners composed of two powerful nations and a third "economically poor," as he admitted England would be, and "I should like to see that trinity a trinity of equals." Since neither of the other two could be pared down, Britain must be built up. He accordingly suggested that the "small democracies of Western Europe" be incorporated into the "next world-wide British system," thus asking them to lay aside their own ambitions and contribute their might to add to the might of the British Empire. It is understandable that this plan aroused little enthusiasm.

A third attempt to strengthen England's position was made by Lord Halifax at Toronto. He called for a closer cooperation between England and the dominions in order that together they might make up one of the world's four great powers. The suggestion aroused strenuous opposition in Canada.

Since there seemed to be no other way to increase the power of England, the last resort seems to be the old game of power politics. It is logical to assume that the next pronouncement on foreign policy should reflect this. Less official form was used this time. An editorial in the London Times, often used as a sounding

EASTER DAY

*Look up, look up, O sorrowing hearts!
The fields abound with Easter joy!
The boughs are white,
The leaves alight,
With hope no winter could destroy.*

*If then the year renews its life
And wakes to innocence and song
Why should not we,
As constantly
Renew our spirits and be strong?*

*Why should not we dissolve our fears
In April boughs white-blossoming . . .
And give to grief
Its true relief
In the great sacrament of Spring!*

—VALERIE GOUGH

A DREAMER'S PLAIN

*This crash and smash of agony,
Rending the vitals, ripping full
The red core of my entity
Is final, without mercy, whole.*

*The shrill and squeal of shot and shell,
That cracks the sabbath in my ear,
Is alien, foreign to my will,
Yet, arrogant, it deepens sheer.*

*Blasted, astray, in darkness, I
And the many that want the sun,
And feel as I, in this dark sky
Are irretrievably alone.*

*What mockery of our estate,
Our blasted claim to our own star,
That we, the dreamers, are always late,
Our tools of peace too blunt for war.*

REVIEWS

board for official opinions, urged that the health of Europe demanded that Germany remain a strong and important economical and political power after the war.

In its "colonial empire," Britain has territory, natural resources and man-power sufficient to make it the equal of either of the other countries if that were truly an empire. However, events in Asia, Africa and the islands of the Pacific, plainly show it to be held together only by force and that bursting at the seams. It is necessary therefore for Britain to seek other sources of strength or else be satisfied with the position of the island kingdom. A difficult choice either way.

Failing to build up the "next world-wide British system," its statesmen seem to be looking towards the production of a system in post-war Europe which will permit them again to dominate by means of power politics. This view is supported by the stand taken by Churchill on monarchical institutions, on the support of the House of Savoy, King George of Greece and the old established orders in general. He supported Peter and Mihailovich until events became too strong for him and even then affirmed that "we cannot disassociate ourselves" from Peter. Power politics cannot be easily applied to democratic forms of government.

The Soviet leaders have concerned themselves with the securing and maintaining of conditions in the countries bordering upon their own. Their aims include a "strong" Poland, a united Germany and a willingness, even eagerness, to cooperate with other nations in every possible way.

The position of the Soviet Union is unique, due to certain well-known and indisputable facts, both geographical and political. These are: It possesses one-sixth of the earth's land surface, much more than half of it virgin, a territory which will require many decades of intensive work by all its people to bring to the level of development for which it has planned. In this respect it stand where the U.S.A. stood at the beginning of the last century with its own hinterland to explore, colonize and develop.

This territory contains such a huge share of the world's natural resources, oil, minerals, furs, forests, water power, fertile soils, that the Soviets covet no possessions of other nations.

The USSR has no big industrialists, corporations, cartels or individuals seeking to exploit the resources of other countries for their own profit. It has no bankers trying to gain control of railroads, mines or other national possessions of other countries by means of loans with economic and political control following. Its loans and trade are carried on by the state on mutually advantageous terms.

The Soviet Union is without racial discrimination and thus is not hated and feared by the non-white peoples of the world.

These are the factors which condition its foreign policy and they are obviously factors making for peace, both along the borders of the Soviet Union and around the world. They are the factors which offer the strongest promise that the Soviets will work for world peace for many decades, if not the next century.

The public dissolution of the Comintern, already a defunct institution, was a step towards world peace, as is its avowed aims not to interfere with other ideologies. Part of Europe on one side and touching America on the other, its friendship is vital for both countries. The similarities between it and the U.S.A., with its hope for a wider Good Neighbor Policy, makes the cooperation of these two powerful countries, neighbors as well as Allies, the most secure hope for world peace for the future. Since in all history, it has been the great powers, not the small ones, which have broken the peace of the world,

Foreign Policies of the U.S.A., the USSR And Britain

if these two greatest nations stand on the side of peace, world wars will not occur until that friendship is broken.

The question of Poland, Latvia and other Balkan countries does not cast doubt upon the good faith of the Soviets. It is the voice of the people and not that of the rich landowners and foreign-supported industrialists which should decide the fate of these small states in Europe as elsewhere. In this country we hear mainly the voice of the latter group and few if any words from the former. The recent expose of the cruelties practiced upon the Polish refugees in Iran by the Polish landowning group, indicates the need of change.

The Balkan countries in the past were geared to the economic policies of Russia and, during their brief separation, their economies suffered because they had no strong ties among themselves or with other nations, beside being used as "small change" by the Great Powers. Under the plan of autonomy within the framework of the Soviet Union, they are assured of prosperity and peace, with the strong arm of a powerful state between them and nations which would use them for their own designs, as has been the case in the past.

Ed's Note: Miss Swezy states the problem very clearly but what do Pine Cone-Cymbal subscribers think of her solution? We should appreciate reader comment on the subject.

Impersonation Is High Spot at Barn Door Show

By KIPPY STUART

It happened on Saturday night, April 1st at the Carmel USO Barn Door Canteen. Excitement ran high. It was whispered that Greer Garson, America's great lady was to make an appearance. A hush fell over the audience. In silent reverence they waited. You know, one of those silences that would register the drop of a bobby pin, if there had been one in the house. I was seated beside Jim Cooke who was in a pet and making sounds like a husband. Where was Ruth? Why... oh why was she always late? Drat redheaded women anyhow.

The curtain parted to reveal a Nanny goat with young, circling and muzzling. A false note on so hallowed an occasion. Lee Crowe, with his charm and poise, stepped into the floodlight. In hushed voice Lee spoke of Random Harvest—of Mrs. Minniver. A ripple of excitement swept the audience as Greer Garson floated into view. A lovely Greer Garson in long, trailing draperies. Her glorious hair was coiffed into a halo giving to her person an aura of its own. Greer swayed as a slender reed sways in a gentle breeze. The audience gasped. And then, her trembling hands pressed to her breast and with restrained passion, Greer Garson spoke. "I have come afar to be with you tonight. I need your help. Is there a gentleman in the house named Jim Cooke?" With exquisite modesty Greer lowered her eyes as she whispered. "I long to press my ruby lips to his. Please... is Jim Cooke here?"

And then, things happened pretty fast; too fast for a confused, befuddled audience to register. The lovely vision discreetly lifted flowering draperies that had been hiding cowboy boots. The lovely vision grabbed a ten gallon hat. Greer Garson vanished and Ruth Cooke, the "Tex" of the Barn Door Canteen sprang alive. In truth, a magnificent performance. "Tex" yelled "April Fool!" The Nanny goat went ba-ba-ba—Jim Cooke's face was very red.

Keep Pampering the Old Darling!

Your WATER HEATER
is a priceless old dear!

He's as comforting as old shoe...your dependable water heater? Normally he would be no worry. But you are doing more family washing and doing more "putting up" that means scalding jars and glasses... doing more floor scrubbing on your own hands and knees. That's all good and patriotic work, BUT... Your water heater is working harder delivering more hours of heating the gallons of water you are using in greater and greater amount. So, sort of pamper your water heater; won't you? This is how; do not waste hot water. Check leaking faucets. Open the drain valve on your heater every few months and run water into a bucket until clear of sediment. And when trouble seems serious, call a master plumber.

By HELEN A. FIELD

Under the guidance of Mr. Sidney Trevvett, chairman of the 1944 Red Cross War Fund Campaign, and Mrs. William Dekker, district chairman, the Carmel Chapter of American Red Cross went over the top early in March and continued to accept contributions during the remainder of that month which had been set apart by President Roosevelt as the War Fund Campaign Month. Carmel residents, conscious of the requirements for money to further the humanitarian services of the American Red Cross, which in time of war are greatly extended by the needs of our servicemen overseas and their families at home, gave voluntarily and generously of their time and money.

The Carmel Red Cross Chapter greatly appreciates the aid in the campaign given by the stores in providing space for window displays and advertising material, and especially appreciates the provision by Mrs. Mary L. Dummage of the store space on Dolores street where headquarters for the Drive was established for the entire month of March.

Special help was given by many people none of whom is forgotten by Carmel Chapter though space permits the names of only a few to appear in this column. Mention, however, should be made of several who meet rather a broad sampling of the Carmel public. Thanks are due to the Carmel Business Association who at their quarterly meeting made an appeal to the merchants for cooperation as a result of which the contributions were far beyond anticipation; to the Churches for bringing the Drive to the attention of their parishioners; to Father O'Connell of the Mission, who made a voluntary special collection at the Mission and turned over a considerable sum to the Campaign; to Mr. B. Franklin Dixon and the Telephone company who decorated the town and Mr. Fred Decker who kept the Drive thermometer on Ocean avenue up to date; to Mr. David Bradford of the Carmel Theatre and Mr. Edward G. Kuster of the Carmel Playhouse who made collections at all performances during the last week of the month and as a result turned over to Red Cross amounts that were very helpful in raising the total for Carmel Chapter.

Miss Jane Burritt as chairman of the Chapter wishes to express her appreciation for the help received during the Campaign.

man to tell him what they think. Moreover, Carmel has had a council made up exclusively of business men for some years. It is time a professional man sat with them at the council table.

Frank Hefling is a young-old timer. He has lived here for years and his way of life is that of the true Carmelite placing a great value on a home, a garden, children in school, heart-warming friendships, and a large measure of fun in participating in the village dramatic production. His fund of practical common sense, his un-failing good humor, and his awareness of the intangible values, which are the true values, that make up the character of the town, make him a truly desirable candidate to serve as ballast to the sometimes "Feverish Five."

And why did we pass over Allen Knight whose integrity and intelligence are unquestioned and who is also an "old timer"? There is only one barrier to his making a good Carmel councilman, but we think it is a very large one indeed. He is a Monterey businessman. Where a man spends the working hours of his day, that is where his interests lie. The welfare of the city in which he has his business is closely tied up with his financial success, and Allen Knight's business is not in Carmel. Moreover, a business man makes most of his contacts with people during his business hours. In Allen Knight's case those are Monterey people. He has friendships in Carmel, but of necessity it is the continual day-time contact with Monterey people that will influence his thinking and his point of view. How can he keep in touch with the thoughts and point of view of Carmel people when it is Monterey people who are his constant associates? We feel, sincerely, that a Monterey business man cannot handle Carmel problems as effectively as men whose entire interests are here and whose day time contacts are with Carmel people. We would regret to see the town drift into the habit of consenting to the presence of Monterey business men on the city council.

Whatever the ultimate choice of the citizens we hope that it will be the result of a record vote. The men who serve on the city council receive no compensation for the time they devote to the work, for the innumerable petty annoyances and criticisms that come their way, for the worry and strain they have to undergo, and I know from frequent contact with them that they worry because they are sincere in their desire to do what is best for the town. There is nothing "in it" for them and they undertake the work through an honest desire to serve their community. In return, the citizens should show their interest and gratitude by turning out to vote when election time comes on Tuesday, April 11. —Wilma Cook.

mel from Connecticut, where people also have a present day loyalty to tradition and the best of the past, Mr. Whittlesey brings the affectionately analytical perspective of an easterner who though knowing many states forsakes them all for Carmel. In the light of such a perspective Carmel has never suffered. It has never so bogged down in its own esthetic traditions that it could not, when the right time came, rally to absorb beneficially the new point of view.

Mr. Whittlesey's is a salutary perspective. As a councilman his would be the modern's approach to our local after-the-war problems, tempered by an inherited basic conservativeness. His fresh outlook and legal objectiveness can be counted on to sanely discover what is really apt to make, in the long run, for the betterment of Carmel, for the most acceptable approximation of the Old Carmel and the New—which is what we all want.

—Eleanor Minton James

Editor of the Pine Cone-Cymbal
Dear Editor:

Two members of the City Council have recently gone on record to the effect that long residence in Carmel is a requisite practically indispensable in a good councilman, ready to defend natural beauty, the good and simple life, etc., and to understand Carmel's peculiar problems. Past history does not always bear this out. In support of this last statement I would like to amplify the records of an event that roused much excitement in Carmel three or four years ago.

It was when the council of that day was casting about for a site for a city hall, including police department and jail, and finally hit upon the unhappy idea of building it on the City Park. Plans were discussed. An architect's sketch of the proposed building was made at the council's initiative, and exhibited. Public opinion was divided—some people wanted to save taxes, thought a city hall, plaza was nice for any town, including Carmel, that there was plenty of room in the woods for the children, etc. Others were appalled at the thought. The council said that an election to decide on the location was not practicable.

At that point the Business Association decided the occasion required a poll of public opinion, and of its own responsibility circularized all of the 1600-odd voters in the city precincts with a double post card questionnaire, asking for the individual voter's opinion as to building on the City Park. Sixty to seventy per cent of those circularized, answered. I was secretary of the Business Association at the time, and helped count the votes. They ran about two to one against the park site. But what struck me especially was the fact that among the one third favoring the city hall, jail, etc. on the City Park, were as many, if not more old time residents.

In other words an old-time council, including an old-time candidate in the present election, together with many other old-time residents, would have gone a long step towards "Main Street," and pledged our one park, a gracious and irreplaceable asset, to a public building and everything that goes with it.

Of course, there were many old-time residents against the city hall on the park—and these, together with sympathizing "newcomers" made up the victorious two thirds.

The only conclusion that one could draw from that informal vote, was that circumstances other than long residence determined one's stand. Perhaps it was the need of the individual for beauty and peace, or a particular type of public conscience, or personal experience of the mistakes made by other towns. To be fair, one must also admit that the council, presented with proof of what Carmel wanted, came around like good citizens and dropped their appalling project.

A sidelight on the incident which is interesting, and I think for the most part forgotten—is the fact that it was the Business Association and not a cultural group—not the artists or the musicians or a women's club—that took the initiative in the step which crystallized public opinion and gave the council a clear course by which to guide themselves. The business people would have saved themselves trouble and money, and future taxes if they had done nothing. For some day the city will buy itself a city hall site, and the business people will help pay for it. We shall still have our own park and nothing but park on that square block at the foot of the hill. And newcomers and "people of no culture" will have helped save it for us.

To bring this rather long dissertation down to the present—we have four candidates for three offices, in Carmel's coming election, all with friends and supporters who will vote for them according to their own convictions. But long residence is not an issue. Ability and character are the only issues.

—Camilla Daniels

Mother Gets Word Lt. William Sharpe Missing in Action

First Lieut. William G. Sharpe, who has served since last November as pilot of a Liberator bomber with the Eighth Army Air Force stationed in England, was reported missing in action over Germany since March 18, according to a wire received from the War Department on Tuesday by his mother, Mrs. Frida Sharpe, of Carmel.

Lt. Sharpe, whose 21st birthday occurred just three days before the reported action, spent his entire boyhood in the Big Sur country and on the Peninsula, and has a wide circle of lasting friends in Carmel. He is a graduate of Monterey high school and entered the air service as a cadet in February, 1942. He was called up for his first training at Santa Ana in the following May, advancing through Cal Aero in Ontario and Minter Field, near Bakersfield, receiving his wings in April, 1943 at Roswell, New Mexico. After further specialized training in Colorado, New Mexico and Kansas, he departed for overseas duty in November.

During the past month he spent a rest leave in London, after completing more than twenty-five missions over the continent, and upon his return to base received his promotion to the rank of first lieutenant.

Lt. Sharpe's sister, Miss Rosalind Sharpe, is at present in Pasadena, where she is serving as a secretary at Cal Tech.

Mrs. Cleaveland, Weybret Speakers At Republican Tea

"Freedom of the people to search for the will of God," was the definition of Democracy offered by Mrs. Agnes Morley Cleaveland, guest speaker at the meeting of the Monterey Peninsula Republican Women's club in Monterey last Friday afternoon at the House of the Four Winds in Monterey.

About 6000 years ago man began to think about the dignity of the human soul, the relation of man to a Creator, and what we call inalienable rights had their beginning, the speaker said. Democracy is the flowering of these spiritual strivings. Our two party system is a laboratory for the testing and finding of the best for man, she continued. Our government takes into consideration the preserving of man's rights. Three branches of the government represent the three sides of man: the legislature, the mental, the executive, the physical, and the judicial, the spiritual.
